GJP'S APPROACH

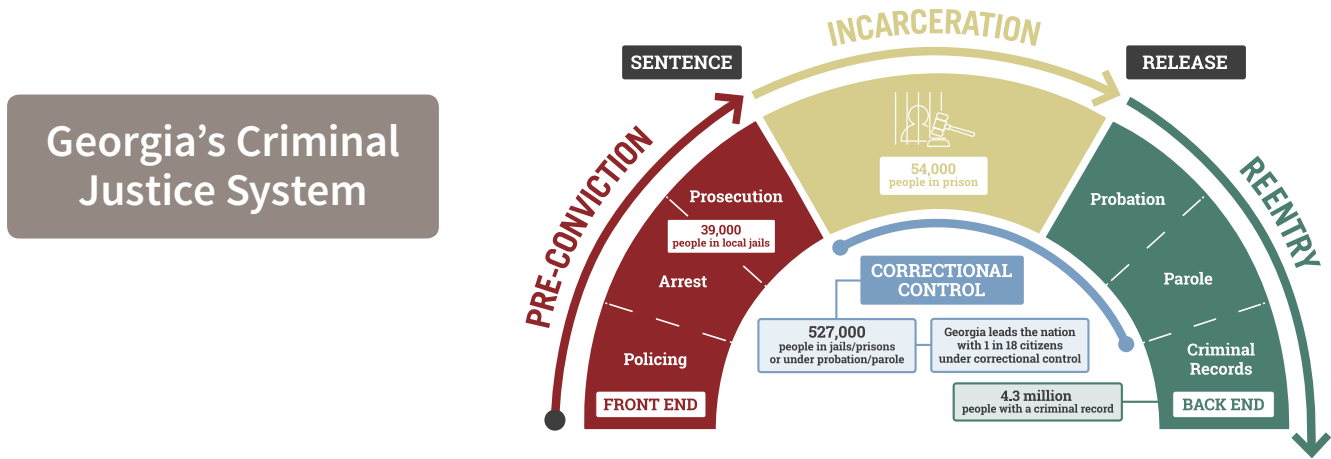

For nearly 35 years, GJP's work has focused on Georgia's criminal justice system, with the mission to make our state more just and equitable. As interest in our work has grown, particularly this year, we have found it useful to revisit "the system" as well as GJP's interventions within it. A simplified overview of the stages of the criminal justice system is illustrated below.

THE SYSTEM IN THREE PARTS: FRONT END, MIDDLE & BACK END

FRONT END: Engagement in the criminal justice system begins with law enforcement (e.g. police, arrest, prosecution)

MIDDLE: Should someone be found guilty, they might be sentenced to jail or prison

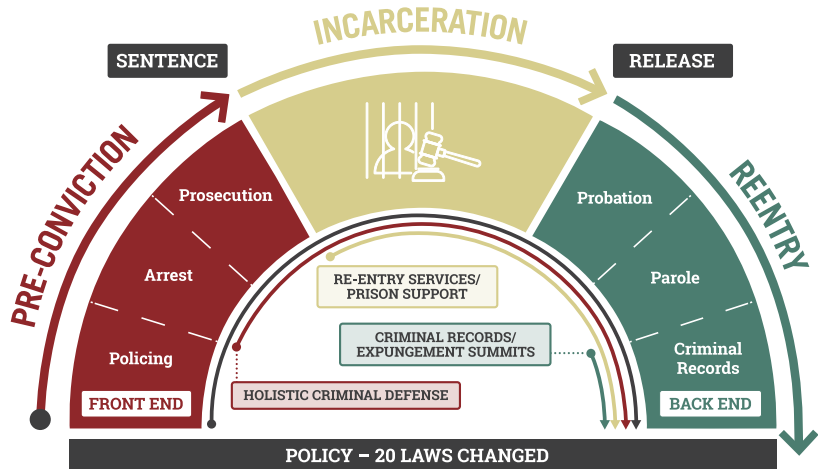

BACK END: Encompasses everything post legal case and post incarceration, including probation, parole, reentry, and the impact of a criminal record (guilty or innocent)

GJP'S INTERVENTION

GJP's works touches every aspect of the criminal justice continuum with two goals: reduce the number of Georgians under correctional control (that is, people in jail/prison or on probation/parole) and reduce reentry barriers for formerly-incarcerated and justice-involved Georgians. Our work encompasses our three-pronged approach to drive impact: direct service, policy work, and community engagement.

HOLISTIC CRIMINAL DEFENSE: GJP provides a combination of legal representation and comprehensive social services, often lasting long after the case is resolved.	CRIMINAL RECORDS: GJP provides criminal records representation to remove barriers to employment, housing and other opportunities. We lead Record Restriction Summits statewide.
PRISON SUPPORT/ REENTRY LAWYERING GJP provides a wide array of reentry services to ensure that our clients receive the help they need during and after incarceration to successfully reenter their communities.	POLICY: GJP has successfully advocated for 20 changes in Georgia law, reducing barriers to reentry for millions of Georgians.

This past year, GJP has reached more people than ever before. Through our direct service work, GJP positively impacted over 6,000 individuals. Our historical policy success with SB 288 – a second chance bill which will make certain convictions eligible for record restriction in Georgia for the first time – will affect approximately 1.5 million Georgians as of January 1, 2021.
